Fund's Manager comment EDM Ahorro

Equities performed well in November. Both sovereign and corporate debt closed with positive results on either side of the Atlantic.

The month's main event was the US presidential election, which resulted in a victory for Donald Trump. This, coupled with the publication of favourable macro data in the US, buoyed risk assets.

Trump is widely expected to stimulate US growth, despite misgivings about the effect his policies may have on inflation and, subsequently, interest rates and sovereign debt, not to mention the potential knock-on effects on medium-term growth. In light of this uncertainty, Treasury interest rates suffered high volatility in November, with 10Y rates at 4.2% (-11 bps) and the 2Y equivalent at 4.19% (+2 bps). In terms of valuation, Treasuries rose 0.8% during the month, to stand at 2.23% YTD.

European sovereign debt rates dipped, consistent with the downward revision of growth and inflation figures in the eurozone, in addition to further interest-rate cuts by the ECB in the months ahead. European sovereign debt climbed +2.3% in November, though French sovereign debt gained a mere +1.8% due to the country's budgetary situation. Meanwhile, interest rates on German 2Y and 10Y debt fell 34 bps to 1.92% and 2.05%, respectively.

Sharp cuts in sovereign debt rates across Europe underpinned the positive performance of corporate credit, though the spread widened slightly (+2 bps IG and +19 bps HY BB-B). European investment-grade credit jumped 1.65% in November (5.11% YTD), while the high-yield BB-B counterpart rose 0.65% (7.7% YTD).

With regard to portfolio changes in November, we sold certain HY and subordinated corporate bonds, which performed admirably in recent months but whose current valuations, vis-à-vis senior IG and sovereign qualities, are very demanding. We also bought top quality, euro-denominated senior IG bonds with some duration.

In early November, duration increased (to 3.7), with sovereign purchases. In recent days, given falling rates in Europe, the portfolio's duration shrank to 2.54, minimising long-term sovereign exposure and boosting the short-term equivalent.
